The English press is severe on Earl Derby now that he is dead, and draw the proper distinctions between politicians and statesmen, assigning the late Earl to a place among the former One metropolitan journal declares that no man can be a statesman who is not above personal vindictiveness, and that Earl Derby never rose above a politician, nor attained the distinction of a statesman His last utterances were against the Irish Church Bill.

At Forest, Ohio, on the morning of October 27 between the hours of two and three o'clock, the inhabitants were startled from their sleep by an explosion of a meteor of great brilliancy in the southwestern part of the heavens The explosion was of such a force as to shake the firmest house and shatter the glass in the windows. There were three distinct explosions in quick succession Several persons who saw it, say it resembled the head light of a locomotive, and appeared of about the same size, and was seen about twenty seconds before the explosion

The following from Brick Pomeroy is said to be a very correct exposition of the Democratic situation Packer is glad that Pendleton is killed Pendleton is glad that Packer is killed Hoffman is glad that both are killed Hendricks is glad that all of them are killed Vallandigham wishes more of 'em were killed And we in common with other good Democrats are sorry such is the case, and yet do not care a continental — who is killed, if those who do the killing will not manage in killing others to kill themselves and by this cowardly, brainless, tricky, selfish illiberal policy cripple principles, and emasculate the Democratic party

The San Francisco Examiner has gone fairly on to the confessional, and is owning up the sins of its party in that city with a frankness that is refreshing Speaking of the political campaigns it has conducted this year, the Examiner says "Two more Conventions such as we had this year will sink the party beyond the hope of resurrection Their doings were a scandal and disgrace to the community Men were appointed to both Conventions who sold their positions and turned an 'honest penny' by means of their votes Many in both Conventions had no regard for the public interests, or appreciation of what was due to the party They were a graceless set of mercenaries who were willing to endanger the success of the party to gratify their own pecuniary greed" That will do very well for the start. It is bully There is not a Radical pen in California which can depict the sins of the Democratic party so graphically But then, there is not a Radical inside the Democratic fold so as to be as well acquainted with its corruption as the editor of the Examiner is

The following joint resolution relative to the appointment of a committee to take into consideration the duties of Washington Territory to the memory of [illegible] Whitman was introduced in the Territorial Legislature a few days ago by Dr Lassiter of Walla Walla

Letter from Jackson County

ASHLAND Oregon N[illegible] 1869

EDITOR [illegible]

A few days ago I sent a communication to the [illegible] publication which was favorably received by the editor A few copies of the paper containing it were printed off when it was discovered by the business manager who is slightly prejudiced in favor of the person to whom it [illegible] alluded He had it taken out and the paper reconstructed and I am therefore compelled to seek a paper whose columns are always open for exposing evils and corruptions from all sources No doubt you have by this time heard of the cowardly attack made by our Deputy Sheriff upon the person of George Jackson, a peaceable citizen whose respectability cannot be questioned resulting in the breaking of his arm and otherwise injuring him It would be well to explain who this Deputy Sheriff (Owens) is. Fresh from Price's army he fled to Mexico, whence he came to Jacksonville. It is supposed that the Democracy of this county, in order to show their high appreciation of his bravery and heroic deeds for the "Lost Cause" made him Deputy Sheriff, [illegible] Democratic [illegible] of respectability to be appointed. His attack on Jackson was no doubt the result of his ideas of "chivalry," as taught while fighting for the defunct Confederacy; and as I am inclined to be charitable I will say that perhaps he was not so much to blame, as it was the result of habit and education He is now [illegible] and in the hands of the Sheriff, yet he is exercising all the functions of his office, riding over the county and summoning a jury for the November term of our Court who will in all probability try him for a penitentiary offence. He is also summoning men [illegible] who will testify for him. This, I believe, is what they call Democratic justice in Jackson county But is not such conduct making a farce of both law and justice? I am glad to see that people here with one voice condemn these outrageous acts on the part of the officials. It is shameful to see their disregard for the good of our country Last year the [illegible] fell short of the year before by [illegible] hundred and fifty thousand dollars and this year it is less than last by twenty thousand. If the county were properly [illegible] its wealth, instead of falling off two hundred [illegible] thousand dollars in two years, would have been increased by that amount. People here are getting tired of paying so roundly to cover the delinquencies of the pets of that party. SIMON.

Wild Western Progress.

The following is from a Cincinnati paper of a recent date

The Democrats have lately carried Wyoming, and elected a delegate to Congress, S. F. Nuckolls by name who [illegible] the strides his party is making toward perfection under the vivifying influence of Western growth. Tourist lately from Wyoming give the following history

This gentleman, a resident of Nebraska while it was yet a territory, in the course of his legal readings and while reviewing the work of the Supreme Court, [illegible] the Dred Scott decision, He never heard of it before; but in its provisions he saw his Democratic opportunity He became a slaveholder under the decision and as late as 1858 [illegible] United States law was binding in Chicago, he followed one of his slaves, who had escaped to that place, and attempted to arrest him But a mob of [illegible] dispelled his [illegible] and he was obliged to beseech the Marshal to put him in jail for safe keeping instead of his slave.

Another of his slaves died suddenly while attempting to [illegible] him in Iowa, and [illegible] after he [illegible] to become an enforcer of the Dred Scott decision in the Territories

The Legislature of Wyoming is quite satisfactory in its making up. Whatever the [illegible] say the West may think of honoring soldiers, the party in Wyoming bestows its favors lavishly upon the blue and gray alike. That is to say, it has elected one Union soldier, who in his [illegible] with the Government, forgot to observe the laws which provide for the protection of national foods and property; and another who was a State rights soldier, and instead of serving his country in the field served his native State of New York, in Sing Sing The wearers of the gray were selected for quantity All in all, it is so to a right royal Democratic assembly.

But they have got a wideawake and thoroughly Republican young Governor [illegible] who himself will outweigh a pretty heavy [illegible] of [illegible] Democracy as is described above. The administration has great faith in him.

THE SUCCESSION TO THE THRONE—NAPOLEON'S IDEA OF THE FUTURE STATE—The journal Paris of October 15, in its political column reproduces the term of a conversation which, it says, took place in 1867, at the time of exhibition between the Emperor of the French and the head of a United States family with whom Louis Napoleon has remained, ever since his residence in America, on terms of affectionate intimacy

It was says that journal, shortly after the illness of the Prince Imperial. Fears had been entertained that his life was in danger, and the Emperor who adores his son, was still haunted by the phantoms of the child's malady "If I had the misfortune," said his Majesty "to lose him, and if I had been convinced of the impossibility of having another direct heir I should certainly have put into execution an extraordinary project. I should have given France the privileges, liberties and institutions of a republic, I should have decided to become the first citizen of my country after having restored to it all that the exigencies of policy have compelled me to deprive it of for a time in a word I should have considered impossible after me, any other form of government than the republic, [illegible] which wisely understood [illegible] by an energetic Power, suits the temperament of the French people. But that dream must be renounced as a father has no right to destroy his son's prospects I shall endeavor to find the means of reconciling two principles which seem incompatible—the empire and liberty My heirs will reign and France will only lose a distinctive epithet, the name of a republic"

GENERAL BELKNAP THE NEW SECRETARY OF WAR [illegible] General William W Belknap, the new Secretary of War was tendered a dinner by his friends in Keokuk Iowa, lately, and [illegible] the toast in his honor as follows:

My Friends and Fellow Townsmen—I can command no words to express fully my gratitude for this undeserved greeting Memory brings before me many of the recollections of the past, that time would fail me did I try to tell of all the thoughts of our other days together which crowd upon me The commencement of the war the formation of the company the parting words as one and another dropped from our ranks to answer the [illegible] we remember all these [illegible] the honored [illegible] and of the [illegible] company who will meet with us [illegible] It would be affectation in [illegible] this gathering [illegible] conferred upon me by [illegible] it is especially gratifying to me to [illegible] of those with whom I have [illegible] the proper performance of the duties [illegible] by Rawlins God bless his [illegible] illustrious before [illegible] but I can only give to the place the [illegible] of my mind and [illegible] upon the [illegible] of the American people A man [illegible] those with whom he has been in constant companionship are his closest critics [illegible] the office commands [illegible] sustains the esteem and regard [illegible] evidenced here to night, I will be content.

Condition of the Masses

The Boston Journal is authority for the statement that throughout New England the poorer classes so called constituting the bulk of the population live better have fewer mortgages and more money in savings bank than before the war. The same remark undoubtedly would apply to the country at large with now and then an exception in the case of a community devoted to some special industry which has suffered depression. There is certainly less absolute poverty among the people than there was before the war. How then, could the cry have started that the rich are growing richer and the poor poorer? The two parts of this statement have no necessary connection with each other. The rich may be growing richer but it by no means follows that the poor are therefore growing poorer. This phrase is a sort of taking antithesis, which owes its currency mainly to its use as a party cry. A minor cause of its obtaining circulation is probably to be found in the fact that the rich have grown richer so palpably and unprecedentedly. This end of the scale stands out conspicuously to the public view. One man suddenly grown rich in a village will sometimes make ten times as much show as twenty of his neighbors who have risen from poverty to comfortable independence. Another reason, perhaps, is to be found in the fact that the whole scale of living has been changing insensibly, so that people will fancy themselves poor and worse off than they were a dozen years ago just because they have got into the habit of spending more. If they will look narrowly they will see that it is not because as they are apt to say, that they have to pay higher for what they buy, but that they buy more things and better things. They use sugar where they once used molasses, silk and other costly stuffs where cotton once sufficed, and get for their children of six years of age articles of dress or ornament that they once never thought of bestowing upon those of twelve or fourteen. These little, but all-powerful, under-currents of social life, are too often forgotten in our estimate of financial changes.

It is these very things, however, that evidence a decided and general increase of prosperity among the people. It has been rather too rapid to be healthy, otherwise the public mind would have better accommodated itself to the new situation, and we should not have seen so wide-spread a tendency to live up to the margin of income, and often to overstep it, giving rise to the discontent and grumbling which is often heard. This tide of prosperity, too, as is natural, tends more immediately to the benefit of capital. In adding a third to the wages of the day laborer, it pours millions upon millions into the coffers of a Stewart. The great establishments eat up the smaller. It is becoming more and more difficult every year, because requiring more and more capital, to start in business for one's self. It must be constantly kept in mind, however, that many of the features of the present social situation, in its financial bearings, are temporary. Our currency is yet inflated, and there is a difference of nearly one-third in value between paper and gold that remains to be closed up. The disturbing effect of the war upon industry is not yet over. When we get fully back to the normal condition of things—when the South is fully at work with free labor, when coin and currency become convertible terms, it will then be time enough to determine whether the saying that the rich are grown richer and the poor poorer has any meaning or sense in this favored land.

British American Confederation

The Victoria papers print a dispatch from Granville, British Secretary of State for the Colonies, addressed to Gov. Musgrave of British Columbia, in which the policy of incorporating that Colony with the Dominion of Canada is strongly urged. The dispatch states that the Queen in all probability will shortly issue an order which will incorporate in the Dominion of Canada the whole of British North America, except British Columbia, and that it is deemed desirable that this single Colony should not remain outside the great body politic which is thus forming itself. The British Government are strongly in favor of union. We quote from Granville's dispatch:

> They believe that a Legislature selected from an extended area, and representing a diversity of interest, is likely to deal more comprehensively with large questions, more impartially with small questions, and more conclusively with both than is possible when controversies are carried on and decided upon in the comparatively narrow circle in which they arise. Questions of purely local interest will be more carefully and dispassionately considered when disengaged from the larger politics of the country, and at the same time will be more sagaciously considered by persons who have had this larger political education.

It is then argued that the interests of every province of British North America will be more advanced by enabling the wealth, credit and intelligence to be brought to bear on every part, than by encouraging each in the contracted policy of taking care of itself, possibly at the expense of its neighbor. Applying this idea to the case of internal transit, the British Secretary says:

> It is evident that the establishment of a British line of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, is far more feasible by the operations of a single government responsible for the progress of both shores of the continent, than by a bargain negotiated between separate perhaps in some respects rival, governments and Legislatures. The San Francisco of British North America would under these circumstances hold a greater commercial and political position than would be attainable by the capital of the isolated colony of British Columbia.

The press of Victoria strongly favors union, and there is strong probability that measures will be taken to effect the consolidation suggested and urged by the Imperial Government.

Sensible Advice.

Just before the recent election in New York a grand Democratic pow wow took place in New York City, at which the great lights of Tammany held forth. The New York Herald in commenting on the speeches, says they were merely a "general overhauling of the party in power, including denunciations of Congress, of the Executive Department, of General Grant and his brothers-in-law of Judge Pierrepont, compared with whom an orator pronounced Corbin a saint and Butterfield a beauty denunciations of negro suffrage and the fifteenth amendment, of the national financial policy now in force including debt, currency taxes internal revenue and tariff laws, and a general repudiation of Radicalism. What else? Only this and nothing more." And what was the speech of Mr. Wood? Nothing more. The Herald then proceeds in the following caustic style:

> What does all this signify? Only the old tory of 1868, 1866, 1864 1860 and 1856 the old tory of the "constitution as it was," "the Union as it was," and Democratic principles as they were before the deluge. We can make nothing better than this of these Tammany speeches. If they indicate any definite policy or purpose on the part of the Democracy it is the purpose of setting aside all that has been done in the [illegible] of the Southern States [illegible] and all that has been done in the provision for the redemption of the public debt since the party was broken up and thrown out of power in 1860. With the heavy Democratic majorities rolled up in this city and Brooklyn the State of New York will doubtless be carried this year upon the platform of a general repudiation of the doings of the Republican party as it was carried last year. But what will this [illegible] Democratic progress here [illegible] will result in the election of [illegible] Congress in 1870 and in another Congress and Administration of the [illegible] as the party.
> Tammany Hall is the great nucleus upon which this party may be reconstructed [illegible] national organization. There are men among her sachems competent to take the lead in this work and without loss of time after this election they should set about it. They can see [illegible] what the party has lost in all the great campaigns since 1856 exactly what is wanted. They have fought against the nigger until they have fought him into civil and political equality and there he is going to stick. They have fought for the constitution as it was until they have made it the constitution as it is, which is no more like the [illegible] charter of our fathers than the sacred old stage coach is like a modern railway train. They have fought for State sovereignty and the old democratic State rights resolutions of 1798 and 1799 until railways and telegraphs have knocked them all in the head. They were knocked in the head with the rebellion which was founded upon the theory of the horse and mule communications of 1860. Railways and telegraphs have changed and are still changing all the old notions and dogmas and principles of parties sects, States and peoples all over the world.

Pollard After Jeff Davis Again

Pollard follows after Jeff Davis as closely as if he were his evil genius. For several years he has been pursuing him with vehement invective and exposing his weaknesses and incompetency to the world. Now that Jeff has got back to America, Pollard, annoyed by his return and by the press gossip in relation to him launches out his anathemas again right and left. We quote a specimen paragraph:

> If Jefferson Davis was a man of sense he might see how far he was ruined and despised in the South, and if he was a man of any dignity sooner than have returned to a land which stands the living and reproachful witness of his folly and degradation, he would prefer to have died died in the coldest embraces of a foreign country—the narrowest home of exile. Can he not know, realize that his career is finished, absolutely finished on the face of the earth? It is the great man who knows when his career is ended, when the last stake of fortune is gone, and nothing remains but the decency of death. Jefferson Davis cannot avoid notoriety, this will cling to him, but let him not mistake the attention which he secures on his reappearance among the wrecked fortunes of the South as fame. He comes back not as an apparition in heroic robes among the scenes of former greatness, not as a figure adorned, with misfortune and with kingly sorrows on its brow—the impersonation of a Lost cause, there is no ghostly grandeur, it is the Evil Genius of the war come back to us with the putrid finger of decay, and the dead phosphorescent gleam of the tomb for its ornament. If thus to draw public attention back to his shrunken greatness, if thus to torture the imagination that would willingly close its eyes on the past; if thus to revisit the land where the bones of tens of thousands of his countrymen which he had put under the harrow have not yet mingled with the clay, and still stare from the shallow trenches of the battle-fields—if this be fame, if this be greatness, if this be the honorable satisfaction of an exile, then is the present mission of Jefferson Davis a well chosen one; otherwise, the black and damnable stalk of an evil spirit over the land.

After this, Jeff and his friends may as well retire and "sing small."

In General

It is now the general opinion that the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment depends for its accomplishment during the present winter on the action of Nebraska. The Legislature of that State will not meet regularly until 1871, but it is believed that the Governor will convene it in special session this winter. The idea that the speedy consummation of the measure will probably depend on the action of Nebraska was what induced President Grant to say recently that he hoped the Legislature of that State would be called together to ratify.

There was a workingmen's party in Massachusetts in the late election. It polled a few votes, but effected nothing in the general result. A correspondent writing from Boston the week before the election, said: "The labor party is controlled by half a dozen demagogues who are too lazy to work, and who live upon the contributions of their industrious fellows, made in the sacred cause of labor reform." This is just what some political dead-beats in Oregon are trying to do. If workingmen are mindful of their own interest they will look out for such leeches, and leave them the alternative of working for an honest living or wrestling with starvation.

It was the "Radical" vote in the Tennessee Legislature that "did the business" for Andrew Johnson. The twelve Republican members held the balance of power in their hands as firmly as ever did a monarch of the East, and not one of them could be induced by any influence to vote for Johnson. They had the power to put the arrogant renegade down, and they were determined to use it. To accomplish this they unanimously resolved to support Cooper, if the Democrats who opposed Johnson would do the same. The programme was carried out, and Johnson received his death blow from the Tennessee Republicans whom he had so infamously betrayed. "Poetic justice" at last.

We notice that a sprig of a lawyer at Eugene launches a column of vituperation at Judge Kelsay through the Guard. This Dorris is the embodiment of self importance like a great many other small lawyers of little natural wit and still less learning. He is not known anywhere except for those qualities which reputable men do not possess. At the last term of Court at Eugene nothing but pity on the part of the Prosecuting Attorney kept him from being fined for hiring a witness for the State, in a case which he (Dorris) was defending, to leave the country. An Attorney who is in such bad odor as to cause other lawyers to refuse to try cases with him as associate counsel cannot gain many laurels by assailing such a man as Judge Kelsay in a community where both are known.

The Herald tells us that no matter how unintelligible or nonsensical the telegrams may become in their transmission from the East it will never alter a word or supply an omission to enable people to understand what they mean. This is no business of ours and that paper for all we care, may present the telegraphic despatches in such an illegible shape as to make them as incoherent and nonsensical as its Sunday leaders. But this is not our style and it is equally none of that paper's business if we prefer to present despatches in such a way as to make them readable and intelligible. It may stick to its ignorant ways if it chooses and remain what it has always been a poor burlesque of journalism but its course furnishes no guide for us. We shall continue the course which has caused the OREGONIAN to be relied on as a news journal, even by its political opponents more implicitly than any Democratic paper in Oregon.

Cleveland Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, Nov 9.—Considerable excitement was created among the railroad men here to-day by the presence of Jay Gould, McHenry and a number of others interested in the Erie and the Atlantic and Great Western roads. Negotiations have been [illegible], and although they have been private, enough is known to justify the statement that they have been of highly belligerent character, and it is understood that McHenry is here to commence legal proceedings to obtain the possession of the Atlantic and Great Western Railroad owing to the failure of the Erie company to comply with the terms of their lease. Heavy damages are involved. It is given out to-night that Gould and his friends failed to satisfy English stockholders, or to effect a compromise with McHenry. To morrow the latter will commence legal proceedings.

It is asserted that Gould and Fisk were badly hurt by their gold operations. They have made war on Corbin and the administration to conceal their bankrupt condition.

The organ continues to wail. Alluding to the reduction in the city printing and the loss it is thereby sustaining, it exclaims:

This is the pure government that was promised by the Radicals before the election! For a wailing organ what unexampled corruption it is to cut off some of its fat! Even to be sure. It still cherishes the pleasing delusion that no ordinance is valid unless it is published in the official organ. So the organ imagines itself to be the most important branch of the city government. We fear it will find that this opinion will bring it no appropriation out of the city treasury.

[illegible] Eastern Trip.—Yesterday we met and had some conversation with Mr. A. A. McCully, President of the P. T. Co., who, with his family, has recently returned from a two months trip to the Eastern States. He says that the trip by rail is a pleasant one and the party enjoyed the traveling very much. On their return, they struck the muddy roads of northern California and Oregon. When they first reached down, he says, Mrs. McCully was disposed to like the States very much and to think she would like to go back there to live. It was then early in September, too early for frosts; the weather was just in the Indian summer stage, and Mr. McCully, himself, had to confess that he rather liked the appearance of things. The party soon went on to New York, where they got a taste of eastern hot weather, which somewhat staggered them. Returning to Illinois, they got on the 18th of October some of the early cold weather of the East. On the 19th, snow fell to the depth of three inches and the thermometer went down considerably below the freezing point. This was enough to set the party upon remembering the milder temperature of the Pacific. Admiration for the Mississippi valley began to "freeze out," in more senses than one. When the party reached Omaha, the boys were having glorious fun on skates. This capped the climax, and Mrs. McCully joined the rest in a fervent wish to get back to Webfoot as soon as possible, admitting freely that she liked Oregon best, after all. Mr. McCully says that the life and rush of things in the East is rather attractive to a business man, but, all things considered, he has no desire to get out of Webfoot.

A Joke at the Butchers.—It is fashionable among boarding house keepers to cuss the butchers and the cooks. The [illegible] tough steaks constitute some excuse, too, for the inevitable growl. We find, however, that a good many people who eat steaks at their own tables, are growling a good deal, not at the toughness but the cost of the steaks. It does seem that meat bills are frightfully high, in some cases, without any good reason for it. [illegible] pound pork cuts, cost now at any shop in the city from [illegible] to eighteen cents a pound. Turning to the [illegible], it is found that butchers pay from six and a half to seven cents, net, for beef on foot; for mutton, [illegible] cents; pork, six cents; and veal six to eight [illegible]. The average price of all these meats to the consumer is twelve and a half and fifteen cents per pound. There is some reason for the growls we hear [illegible] large profits. We are told that the butchers [illegible] and that a scale of prices has been fixed, by which all sell. So far as we are concerned, we admit the right of every man to fix his own price on what he has to sell, and to manage his own business. If we can't buy or dont want to buy his goods we will let them alone. But it would seem that there is a chance for men to come in here and make money in the meat market [illegible] upon a much lower scale of prices. At all events, a little healthy competition might have a good effect in favor of the consumers.

[illegible].—The average temperature yesterday was [illegible] fifty degrees.

Real estate sales within the last week have aggregated over $[illegible] in city and county.

The [illegible] Oneonta arrived late last evening in consequence of a detention of the boat above.

The bark Webfoot was towed back to East Portland [illegible] to discharge railroad iron.

The Willamette boats within a day or two have brought down a considerable number of sawed knees for repair of the O. S. N. Co.'s boats.

The [illegible] will go down to Springville this [illegible] to take 100 tons produce, and will then leave [illegible].

The [illegible] washed into the middle of Front street by the tide of Wednesday night, remained there all day [illegible].

We hear that Mr. Shubrick Norris, one of the original [illegible] is going to start, in a few days, on a visit to the Eastern States.

The [illegible] Theatre.—A very fair audience was brought out last night by the announcement of the great historical [illegible] of Richelieu. The piece was cast with unusual strength and we are pleased to testify to the general excellence of the performance. With Mr. Bates, the character of Richelieu has been a long study. His [illegible] of it, last evening, afforded evidence that he understood it thoroughly and well. Julie de Mortemar [illegible] with all Mrs. Bates' usual correctness. Mr. [illegible] as De Mauprat was deservedly applauded. Mrs. [illegible], by her spirited and correct acting, made all that [illegible] of the character of Francois, and was frequently greeted with applause. The other parts were [illegible] in quite creditable style. To-night we are to have the beautiful drama of the [illegible], a play which never wears out—with Mrs. Bates as Pauline, [illegible], supported by an excellent cast of the whole company.

Circuit Court—Upton, Judge.—Proceedings of Thursday, Nov. 11th:

[illegible] vs. J. P. O. Lownsdale, et al; default entered [illegible] defendants.

[illegible] Woodard vs. Henry X. Woodard; default [illegible].

[illegible] vs. Multnomah county; plaintiff nonsuited.

[illegible] vs. Edgar Poppleton; a jury impanneled [illegible] the evidence taken. Trial occupied [illegible].

The grand jury came into Court and presented an indictment against Edward Kennedy for burglary. The [illegible] no means of procuring counsel, the Court appointed M. F. Mulky and B. F. Hensill to defend.

[illegible] Steamer.—Captain E. O. Smith's new [illegible] which he has been building at Monticello, was [illegible] city Wednesday evening by the Carrie. [illegible] off to receive her machinery here. [illegible] appearance, when finished, she will resemble the [illegible]. Her hull is one hundred feet long [illegible] beam. At present all her upper works [illegible], though in such state of progress that not [illegible] three weeks will be required to complete [illegible]. The machinery and boiler taken out of the [illegible] will be placed in her, and it is expected [illegible] a trial trip in about two months. [illegible] Mary Bell, and will be run as an opposition boat between Portland and Astoria.

A [illegible].—On Monday evening Mr. [illegible] announces himself in the small [illegible] "distinguished elocutionist and mirth-provoker [illegible] Bowman natur glonerally," will [illegible] at Philharmonic Hall, to consist [illegible] and recitations from the standard American [illegible], interspersed with Hibernian panegyric; Tangle-Teutonic recitations; quaint [illegible], quiet and comical; delineations of [illegible]; imitations of celebrated actors, orators, etc. We should say, judging from the [illegible], that Pimmmer ought to toot his horn [illegible].

[illegible] the Salesman: Jos. Watt offers for [illegible] lots near the court house, known as the [illegible] and lots.

The Medical Department of the Willamette University, [illegible] this winter under favorable auspices. [illegible] students in attendance on the lectures, [illegible] filled by Professors well qualified in [illegible] departments.

[illegible] evening for the last three days we have had rain storms. The streets, where there [illegible] possible chance for dams in the gutter or chokes [illegible] have been flooded to such a degree as to [illegible] water travel easier than land travel. The river was [illegible] Monday. The general "outlook" is a wet one.

[illegible] to Oregon.—Among the award of premiums [illegible] the California Industrial Fair, we notice the [illegible] to Oregon inventions and production: J. W. [illegible] Dynamometer, silver medal; Oregon City Woolen Mills, sample of cassimere, silver medal; John [illegible] weatherboard tool, diploma.

[illegible].—We learn that there was a terrible blow at the mouth of the Columbia, last Monday night. The Oriflamme went out that day, but as she had ample time to get out to sea, there is no apprehension that she met with any damage. No vessel, steamer or sailer, has ever been lost at sea off our coast.

A Public Convenience.—We notice that a saloon is [illegible] at the corner of First and Washington streets. This will supply a great public want" as persons passing [illegible] that quarter, have heretofore been compelled to travel the unreasonable distance of over half a block before [illegible].

[illegible] at Boise City.—A telegram from Umatilla, [illegible] day, says that at Boise City on the 6th inst., [illegible] Burmeister shot and killed R. B. Morford, of [illegible]. The news came to Umatilla by stage, without any particulars indicating the provocation to the homicide.

[illegible] Church Festival.—The festival held at Washington [illegible] Hall, Wednesday evening, by the ladies [illegible] Church is said to have been quite a pleasant and [illegible] affair. The receipts were about $350. The [illegible] is to be used in finishing St. Helen's Hall.

A Long Walk.—A telegram to the Bulletin, dated Los [illegible], Cal., Nov. 1st, says: "On Saturday, a man [illegible] from Oregon, on foot, passed here for San Bernardino. No doubt about that couple getting along in the world.

Oregon Patents.—The Mining and Scientific Press of [illegible] 30th contains notices of the issue of the following patents to Oregon inventors: Boat detaining apparatus—[illegible] Brown, Astoria; Gang Plow—Wm. Funk, Portland.

Hurt.—One of the railroad hands at work, Wednesday night, loading rails upon a car, was badly hurt by slipping while pushing a rail up an incline. The rail came down upon him, injuring him seriously about the hips.

[illegible] Duties.—We see a statement in the Bulletin, that, from the first of January to November 1st, total [illegible] paid for duties at San Francisco, was $7,171,[illegible].

The Yamhill River.—We learn from passengers who came down yesterday, that the Yamhill river, at Dayton, rose six feet during Wednesday night.

The [illegible] continues to arrive by hundreds of [illegible]. The Webfoot having a locomotive on board is on her way to our city, and everything to facilitate the building of the great Railroad is progressing as well as those Nonpareil Busser Suits and those extra [illegible] "Roundabouts" are selling at KOHN & FISHEL'S, whose Stock of CLOTHING and GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS is the handsomest ever imported [illegible], and their principle of selling with SMALL PROFITS proves a benefit to the public as well as to [illegible]. Their Stock of DRY GOODS is positively offered at COST.

Something More About Nitro Glycerine.

Notwithstanding the enormous explosive force of nitro-glycerine, which in some instances, as in the "King's service," Silesia, actually blew two workmen to atoms, so that no trace of them was discoverable, its use is steadily increasing, because it forms the cheapest blasting material, and gives the least labor, especially where water is encountered in mining operations. It may, therefore, not be out of place to mention all the precautions in the use and handling of this agent of destruction, which experience recommends. In the first instance I shall refer to Nobel's proposition of dissolving the nitro-glycerine in methylic alcohol, produced during the distillation of wood, and, on that account, also called wood spirit. Dissolved in a large quantity of these spirits, the glycerine is so diluted, its single particles brought apart at such great distances that they burn only slowly, and are incapable of igniting each other with the rapidity commensurate to an explosion. To render such oil again explosive, it is necessary to mix the methylic solution with water, when the nitro-glycerine separates as a heavy oily liquid ready for use. This last addition should be made immediately before using the glycerine, so that it has no time to decompose.

Ordinary workmen, and miners, unused to this dangerous agent should never be permitted to play and experiment with it. The tin cans in which it is transported should always be contained in a larger vessel, filled with water, which tends to cool the glycerine sufficiently to prevent its spontaneous decomposition. Even when not on the transport it should be kept in the same manner or in cool fire proof vaults. Should the can happen to be frozen when needed, the can containing it ought to be placed in lukewarm water, to be thawed out; since in the frozen state the nitro-glycerine is much more destructive, and much less manageable than when liquid. A simple touch has, in that state, sent it on its mission of destruction in some instances. The point at which this freezing or solidification occurs is six degrees Centi-grade. If the blasting oil is used without a cartridge, the charge should be but lightly covered with sand and clay. In case such charge refuses to ignite, the cover of sand should be removed but partially and carefully, and filled with a small portion of the blasting oil, the ignition of which is usually sufficient for the explosion of the rest of the charge, remaining in the hole bored. The oil should, under no circumstances, no matter whether frozen or liquid, be treated roughly; should not be beaten with a hammer or cut with an axe, as is often done by careless workmen. Highly recommendable is the use of oil in cartridges, where it is less within the power of workmen to abuse it. In this condition the entire charge is also always certain to be exploded when desired; while it has occurred in the use of the oil, poured into the blasting holes loosely, that part of it drained into crevices of the adjacent rock, where, by subsequent removal of the loose stones, it exploded, when least expected. Its transportation in cans, placed in boxes of sawdust, should, by all means be prohibited; for, if accidentally the can should become leaky, the nitro-glycerine, saturating the porous sawdust, would soon heat up sufficiently for spontaneous decomposition, which would increase in extent, until it assumed the shape of an explosion.

The above precautions are indicated in the transportation of the ordinary nitro-glycerine. But Nobel's invention of "dynamite" ought to abolish the use of ordinary blasting oil altogether. Dynamite is no more nor less than nitro-glycerine, mixed with at least 25 per cent. of finely powdered earth, sand or glass. This admixture renders the blasting oil unexplosive, except by actual contact with a spark of flame; it being necessary, in both cases, to confine the oil in a closed space to produce an explosion. Its power is calculated to be eight times greater than that of gunpowder, and it can be produced proportionally cheaper than nitro glycerine, to produce no desire for the use of the latter. The dynamite forms a powder which is used best in paper cartridges, containing a fuse. The blasting holes made for it, should, as nitro-glycerine, be made very narrow. It may briefly be mentioned that the dust of dynamite, like the dust and vapor of nitro-glycerine, is poisonous, causing headache and dizziness, although miners generally become accustomed to it. For the sake of preventing heating or great damage, in case of an accident, nitro glycerine or dynamite should never be stored or transported in large packages; they should always be stored by themselves, not with other merchandise, and no one should have access to them but a person familiar with their great destructive power and general nature.—Spectator.

Movements of the Chinese.

Koopmanschap, who is an undoubted authority on matters relating to the Chinese, says that at the present time more of these people are going back to China than are coming hither from that country. The San Francisco Bulletin has the following remarks in connection with this subject:

It would appear therefore, that there is no immediate prospect of our coast being flooded with Chinese immigration. That bugbear of September scarcely survived the election in which it did such fearful execution. Whether a great number of the Chinese will enter the country at all—any part of it—now, soon or ever, remains a question by no means certain to be answered in the affirmative. It is pretty sure, however, that permanent settlement of Chinese is never likely to be made in this country, until the whole social organization and religious system of the Chinese Empire are changed. The efforts of the Southern States to procure any great number of Mongolians, or to supplant with them the labor of the freedmen, seem likely to be a failure. Considering the vast distance to be traversed by them, whether they cross California or (as Koopmanschap believes they must) come by way of Suez to New Orleans, in either case the cost of their journeys to and fro (for they are bound to return) added to their wages, must make them relatively an unprofitable class of laborers for the Southern States. On this coast they must accept in the future, as they have in the past, such work as falls to them in dependent employments. The supply cannot exceed the demand, nor can the demand continue great after the country has become settled and its production diversified. We need the Chinese now mainly as railroad builders, in which capacity they have done and will do invaluable service. But, beyond this, there is no reason to believe that they will come into competition with white labor in any injurious manner.

Mrs. Lincoln.—The wife of a prominent Philadelphian, writing from Baden-Baden, says: "We have passed many happy, sad hours together. The first night we spent in Frankfort we sat talking all night long, until the bright day dawned in at the window of her cheerless, desolate room. Not having seen her since I met her in her sick room, after Mr. Lincoln's death, of course the meeting quite overcame her. For a while tears and sobs, such as I never witnessed, rent her anguished heart. She is as great a mourner now as the day she lost the best of husbands. The Duke of Nassau and many of the nobility have called on her, but she declined receiving them. Her life is the loneliest I ever saw."

A report that Hayward, one of the Directors of the Bank of California, had failed for a large sum caused a heavy run a few days ago on the branch offices of the bank at White Pine. At the Hamilton office upwards of $100,000 was drawn out in a short time, but as there appeared to be plenty of money left the excitement soon ceased.

Immorality of the Prince of Wales.

A London correspondent of the New York Herald charges the Prince of Wales with the grossest outrages on morality and decency. The writer says:

His companions and intimate friends are all young, unmarried noblemen, who are notorious for the immoral lives they lead, and who openly boast of the conquests they achieve and the female companions they patronize. The Prince, although married to one of the most charming women in Europe, has, it is reported everywhere, almost broken his wife's heart by his infidelities, and very much of her long continued illness may be attributed to this source of annoyance. Curious to say, his Royal Highness, although by no means better than most young men of his years, never became openly immoral until after he married.

He carried on a desperate flirtation, if not worse, with a duchess who was one of his wife's maids of honor, and since she left his household, has been undisguised in his attentions to a notorious French actress (Schneider, we presume.) He was very attentive to her when she was in London, and recently visited her in Paris. She asked him to lend her £10,000 ($50,000.)

The Prince had not the money, but was induced to sign a note or bill for the amount payable a couple of weeks after date. In London, his Royal Highness' "paper" would have been found very difficult indeed, if not impossible, to discount, but in Paris there are still financial agents who put faith in princes. At any rate the bill was discounted, and it found its way in due time to London, where it was presented for payment at Coutts' Bank. The document, not being signed by the Comptroller of the Prince's Household, had an aspect of irregularity about it that the bankers did not like, and they hesitated before paying it. The Prince was abroad again and could not be referred to, and the story somehow got to the ears of his royal mother. The money was paid, in order to avoid scandal, but her Majesty—who although in retirement, knows as well as any body in England what was going on—gave her eldest son "a bit of her mind" upon the whole transaction, and told him pretty plainly what she thought about married men with families of their own, and very much in debt making presents of $50,000 to women of whom the less said the better.

His brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, is, it is generally believed, quite as bad, if not worse; but being an unmarried man, the sin is not so great. And the same is said of Prince Arthur the young Prince now in Canada, though in a very much less degree. The effect of his Royal Highness' example is gradually but very surely telling upon the morals of the higher and middle classes of the land.

A Long Time Between Drinks.

General Marcy relates the following incident in a recent number of Harper's Monthly:

"I passed the Winter of 1840-'41 in the very hospitable city of H——, where I was so fortunate as to form an extended circle of agreeable acquaintances, who, by their genial and intelligent social intercourse, contributed greatly to my happiness, and enabled me to while away the monotony of a protracted Northern Winter in the most satisfactory manner. In the Spring following, as I was about taking my departure, my friends called, and after wishing me all manner of good fortune, bade me a kind adieu, all excepting one particular friend, J. S——, who had left. He detained me for some time upon the little porch fronting the hotel, seeming loth to say good bye; but as it was nearly time for the train to arrive, I was forced to tear myself away from him, and was on the point of stepping into the carriage when he entreated me to go back and take a farewell glass.

I was obliged to decline, remarking, as I closed the carriage door, that we would postpone our drink until my return; and away I went, consoling myself with the fervent anticipation that I might soon be permitted to revisit the excellent friends I was leaving behind. But alas, for the realization of my dreams, a vicissitudinary tortuous trail led me into Texas, Mexico, Arkansas and Utah, and it was nearly twenty years before I could get back.

The time came at last, however, and I anxiously drove toward the old hotel, where I expected to see a great many changes; but, to my surprise, I found all the surroundings looking precisely as when I left, and to my utter astonishment, there was my old friend J. S——, who was the last to bid me farewell, seated in the same spot upon the little porch, apparently in the same arm-chair, and with his feet raised at the elevation, and resting against identically the same post as when I declined his invitation to join him in the stirrup-cup.

Getting out of the carriage, I walked directly up to him, gave him a hearty slap on the shoulder, and said: 'Well, S——, as you are so pressing, I don't care if I do take a drink.'

He looked up with astonishment, and did not recognize me at first, but soon appreciated the joke, and seizing my hand, replied that that his patience was nearly exhausted in waiting for my return, and that if I had not arrived within the next five or six years, he would have been obliged to drink alone."

RESULTS OF ENTERPRISE AND INDUSTRY.—In the year 1830, a visitor to the town of St. Johnsbury, Vt., would have remarked it as a picturesque, quiet village of a few hundred inhabitants, with a church, one store, a schoolhouse and a blacksmith shop. The surrounding country was settled by hardy farmers, principally engaged in raising flax; but owing to the great expense of transportation and the limited facilities for manufacturing, the products of the country were not available in improving the place. About that time Mr. Thaddeus Fairbanks invented the world-renowned Fairbanks Scale, known and recognized by all nations as the standard, and from that eventful period the growth and prosperity of this suburban village has gradually increased, until banks, hotels, stores and schoolhouses are numerous, and the little blacksmith shop of forty years ago has grown to be a mammoth manufactory, employing five hundred mechanics and consuming 2,000,000 feet of lumber, several hundred tons of coal, and four thousand tons of iron per annum.

Last year, Messrs. Fairbanks manufactured thirty-three thousand three hundred and eighty-three scales, and furnished the Passumpsic Railroad with sixteen million pounds of freight. The disbursements of this company for wages alone, in 1868, averaged twenty thousand dollars per month. Thus, enterprise and industry populates towns and cities, builds railroads and factories, and brings to light the ingenuity of man.

HOAGLAND'S NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!

W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

Carriage Factory,

Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.

He respectfully refers to the following

CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

FORM OF PROPOSAL, GUARANTEE, AND CERTIFICATE.

Proposal.

The undersigned ——, whose post office address is ——, county of ——, State of —— proposes to convey the mails of the United States, from July 1, 1870, to June 30, 1874, on route No. ——, between —— and ——, under the advertisement of the Postmaster General, dated September [illegible], 1869, with "celerity, certainty, and security," for the annual sum of —— dollars.

This proposal is made with full knowledge of the distance of the route, the weight of the mail to be carried, and all other particulars in reference to the route and service, and also after careful examination of the laws and instructions attached to the advertisement.

Dated (Signed.)

Guarantee.

The undersigned, residing at ——, State of ——, undertake that, if the foregoing bid for carrying the mail on route No. —— be accepted by the Postmaster General, the bidder shall, prior to the 1st day of July, 1870, enter into the required obligation or contract to perform the service proposed, with good and sufficient sureties.

This we do, understanding distinctly the obligations and liabilities assumed by guarantors under the 27th section of the act of Congress of July 2, 1836.

Dated (Signed by two guarantors.)

Certificate.

The undersigned, postmaster at ——, State of ——, certifies, under his oath of office, that he is acquainted with the above guarantors, and knows them to be men of property, and able to make good their guarantee.

Dated (Signed.)

Cal., Oregon, and Wash. —— 4.

INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS AND POSTMASTERS;

Containing also conditions to be incorporated in the contracts to the extent the Department may deem proper.

1. Seven minutes are allowed to each intermediate office, when not otherwise specified, for assorting the mails, but on railroad and steamboat routes there is to be no more delay than is sufficient for an exchange of the mail pouches.

2. On railroad and steamboat lines, and other routes where the mode of conveyance admits of it, the special agents of the Post Office Department, also post office blanks, mail bags, locks and keys, are to be conveyed without extra charge.

3. On railroad and steamboat lines the route agents of the Department, also the British and Canada mails, when offered, and the agents accompanying them, are conveyed without charge, and for the use of the United States agents a commodious car, or part of a car, properly lighted, warmed, and furnished, and adapted to the convenient separation and due security of the mails, is to be provided by the contractor, under the direction of the Department.

Railroad and steamboat companies are required to take the mail from, and deliver it into, the postoffices at the beginning and end of their routes, and to and from all offices not more than eighty rods from a station or landing. Proposals may be submitted by the companies for the performance of all other side service—that is, for offices over eighty rods from a station or landing.

There will be "way bills" prepared by postmasters, or other agents of the Department, to accompany the mails conveyed on railroads and steamers, specifying the number and destination of the several bags. On other principal routes, likewise, receipts will be required and way bills forwarded; the latter to be examined by the several postmasters, to insure regularity in the delivery of mails.

4. No pay will be made for trips not performed; and for each of such omissions, not satisfactorily explained, three times the pay of the trip will be deducted. For arrivals so far behind time as to break connection with depending mails, and not sufficiently excused, one-fourth of the compensation for the trip is subject to forfeiture. For repeated delinquencies of the kind herein specified, enlarged penalties, proportioned to the nature thereof, and the importance of the mail, may be made.

5. For leaving behind or throwing off the mails, or any portion of them, for the admission of passengers, or for being concerned in setting up or running an express conveying intelligence in advance of the mail, a quarter's pay may be deducted.

6. Fines will be imposed, unless the delinquency be promptly and satisfactorily explained by certificates of postmasters or the affidavits of other credible persons, for failing to arrive in contract time; for neglecting to take the mail from, or deliver it into a postoffice, for suffering it to be wet, injured, destroyed, robbed or lost; and for refusing, after demand, to convey the mail as frequently as the contractor runs, or is concerned in running, a coach, car, or steamboat on a route.

7. The Postmaster General may annul the contract for repeated failures to run agreeably to contract; for violating the post office laws, or disobeying the instructions of the Department; for refusing to discharge a carrier when required by the Department to do so, for running an express as aforesaid; or for transporting persons or packages conveying mailable matter out of the mail.

8. The Postmaster General may order an increase of service on a route by allowing therefor a pro rata increase on the contract pay. He may change schedules of departures and arrivals in all cases, and particularly to make them conform to connections with railroads, without increase of pay, provided the running time be not abridged. The Postmaster General may also discontinue or curtail the service, in whole or in part, in order to place on the route superior service, or whenever the public interests, in his judgment, shall require such discontinuance or curtailment for any other cause; he allowing as full indemnity to contractor one month's extra pay on the amount of service dispensed with and a pro rata compensation for the amount of service retained and continued.

9. Payments will be made by collections from, or drafts on, postmasters, or otherwise after the expiration of each quarter—say in November, February, May and August.

10. The distances are given according to the best information; but no increased pay will be allowed should they be greater than advertised, if the points to be supplied are correctly stated. Bidders must inform themselves on this point, and also in reference to the weight of the mail, the condition of the roads, hills, streams, &c., and all toll bridges, ferries or obstructions of any kind by which expense may be incurred. No claim for additional pay, based on such ground, can be considered, nor for alleged mistakes or misapprehension as to the degree of service, nor for bridges destroyed, ferries discontinued, or other obstructions increasing distance, or expense occurring during the contract term. Offices established after this advertisement is issued, and also during the contract term, are to be visited without extra pay if the distance be not increased.

11. Bidders are cautioned to mail their proposals in time to reach the Department by the day and hour named, up to March 1, 1870, for bids received after that time will not be considered in competition with a bid of reasonable amount received in time. Neither can bids be considered which are without the guarantee required by law and a certificate of the sufficiency of such guarantee.

12. Bidders should first propose for service strictly according to the advertisement and then, if they desire, separately for different service; and if the regular bid be the lowest offered for the advertised service, the other propositions may be considered.

13. There should be but one route bid for in a proposal. Consolidated [illegible]
